Marketing Communications Specialist (m/f)

What is it all about?

- you will be responsible for creating marketing materials (product brochures, presentations, datasheets etc.) for our global sales organization
- you will contribute to the development of communication concepts for products in close co-operation with our product managers
- you will write texts for advertisements, newsletters, and press releases and play an active role in designing graphics
- you will help product managers create technical papers and articles
- you will maintain the product and application-related content of our website

What kinds of skills do you need to have?

- you should have professional experience in the fields of Technical Writing, Technical Translation, Media Design or Marketing Communications
- you should be fascinated by technology and (ideally) have an Electrical Engineering education
- you should enjoy writing and making intensive use of your excellent communication skills in English and German; other languages are most welcome
- you should enjoy working with layouts, graphics and image editing software (Adobe® Creative Suite) and the Microsoft® Office package
- you should be able to work in a self-responsible and organized manner while being communicative, creative and convincing
